Thirty patients with chronic hepatitis C were investigated to determine the prevalence of hepatitis C virus (HCV) genotype in Taiwan. The prevalence of genotype 3 was 73.3%, which was much higher than previous reports in the United States and Europe. No genotype 1 or 2 strains were found in the Taiwanese patients. Genotype 3a was predominant in the patients and the majority of them were infected by blood transfusion. However, 6 patients were infected by intravenous drug use, and genotype 2a was found in two of them. In conclusion, the distribution of HCV genotypes in Taiwan is more complicated than previously reported. Genotype 3a is the main cause of chronic hepatitis C infection in Taiwan.
